Once and would-be spies Richard Helms and Robert Redford out in the cold

Will the real CIA man please stand up? Perched on director's chairs, former Central Intelligence Agency chief Richard Helms and actor Robert Redford were too engrossed in conversation to come in from the cold of an East River location in New York, where Redford is playing a CIA agent in a movie. Helms—now ambassador to Iran but back in the U.S. trying to bail himself and the CIA out of hot water—had accepted an invitation passed along by a mutual friend to watch Redford film a scene in "Three Days of the Condor." No clues as to what the once and would-be spies discussed. "At this point in time," grinned Redford, "we are not at liberty to divulge the details."
